

Conservation Northwest's Values

— Adaptability —

While we are firm in our vision, our forward actions are tuned by being outwardly alert and inwardly reflective.

— Boldness —

We're confident in our ambitious vision for wildlife and wildlands and are comfortable taking risks, including in the diversity of stakeholders with whom we collaborate.

— Collaboration —

We listen with respect and communicate with transparency to find common ground and create partnerships built on trust.

— Empathy —

We actively engage with the perspectives and values of affected communities, including those that are nonhuman.

— Equity —

People make conservation happen. We seek to be and to create a culture of inclusion, where everyone—including those who have been historically left out of the conversation—has a voice and influence.

— Integrity —

We honor our partnerships and commitments, aspiring to mutually beneficial solutions.

— Pragmatic Idealism —

We pursue our aspirations through strategies that are outcome oriented.

— Rationality —

We rely on critical thinking, science, and a breadth of experience to inform our judgement and our search for truth.

— Tenacity —

Once committed to a mission-critical objective, we persist through adverse circumstances and changing political winds.
